Learning outcomes for the creative writing and content development

- Students will understand, analyze and effectively use the conventions of the English language.
- Students will examine how texts function across a range of genres, contexts and cultures.
- Students will fulfill Missouri State University's Public Affairs Mission by analyzing how their writing, reading and research:
 - Respond to existing leadership and help provide new leadership.
 - Represent cultures and encounters between cultures.
 - Answer the needs of existing communities and creative new communities (or how these skills might be meaningfully applied in these areas).
 - Learning outcomes are statements that describe the knowledge or skills students should acquire by the end of a particular assignment, class, course, or program. They help students:
 - understand why that knowledge and those skills will be useful to them
 - focus on the context and potential applications of knowledge and skills
 - connect learning in various contexts help guide assessment and evaluation

Good learning outcomes emphasize the application and integration of knowledge. Instead of focusing on coverage of material, learning outcomes articulate how students will be able to employ the material, both in the context of the class and more broadly.

Consider using approximately five to ten learning outcomes per assignment; this number allows the learning outcomes to cover a variety of knowledge and skills while retaining a focus on essential elements of the course.
